Powerful Combine of Congressional Lawyers Plan
To Force Action

TO ASSURE CITIZENS

Movement Would Directly Affect at Least a Score of Agencies

WASHINGTON, Mar. 11.—(INS)—A powerful group of Congressional lawyers have combined to force action on legislation which would curb the broad judicial authority of Major Federal bureaus. It was disclosed today.

The movement, which would directly affect at least a score of agencies, such as the National Labor Relations Board, is designed to assure the citizen of his "day in court" in cases of wide importance.

A storm of protest already has descended upon the House Judiciary Committee, which is considering the subject, from heads of Government bureaus who would be directly affected. Sponsors of the movement deny that it is aimed at New Deal agencies, although many of the agencies affected have been created since the New Deal assumed power.

The practice of bureaus of encroaching on the courts—or of Congress granting them judicial powers—is said to date back many years before the Roosevelt administration entered office.

The American Bar Association, through a special committee, is backing the movement.

A House Judiciary subcommittee now is considering a bill on the question. The measure would provide for review of administrative orders by a body of three persons in an agency and then the question could be taken into United States Courts of Appeals.

PHILA. PRESBYTERY ASKS FOR CHURCH DISSOLUTION

Asks That Neshaminy Church
Turn Over Its Property
To Presbytery

ARGUMENT ON APRIL 10

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 11.—Following a hearing in equity in which The Presbytery of Philadelphia North is asking for a decree of dissolution of the trustees of the Presbyterian Church of Neshaminy in Warminster township, President Judge Hiram H. Keller and Judge Calvin S. Boyer set April 10 as the date for argument.

The Presbytery of Philadelphia North filed a petition asking for the dissolution and granting of a preliminary decree, and also for the delivery of the title and possession of all property, real and personal, to the incorporated trustees of the Presbytery.

The Rev. John K. Lynn, clerk of the Presbytery, testified that the Presbytery recommended dissolution in January, this year. He testified that the continuous history of the church since 1726 would not be interrupted because there are several churches which are off-shoots of the Warminster church.

His testimony revealed that the church owned 29 shares of Pennsylvania Railroad stock, some funds, trust funds and real estate including the church, church site, cemetery and a manse.

The Rev. Gerald Ramaker, a Presbyterian clergyman, testified he gave notices of dissolution on two different Sundays in the church.

The Rev. Richard R. Williams, secretary of the trustees of the Presbytery Philadelphia North, testified as to the action of the Presbytery which took a formal step of dissolution at a meeting held December 12, 1938.

Dr. Benjamin M. Gemmill, of Hartselle, a former pastor, who is opposing the dissolution, in his testimony said that when his ministry terminated there were about 60 members of the church.

Dr. Gemmill read the names of about 25 men and women out of a list of about 40 who were described as "being members in good standing." He admitted that only about one-half of the 25 attended worship in the church, but explained that some of them live too far away but still contribute to the church.

"I kept the sessions' book but did not classify the members according to their communicant standing," said Dr. Gemmill.

Dr. Gemmill also testified that he has made an appeal to the Presbyterian Synod protesting the dissolution of the church.

His wife, Clara M. Gemmill, who was treasurer of the church until May, 1938, when the congregation expired, testified there is a balance of $92.77 in the Harbor National Bank and that she has $9 in her own possession, which belongs to the church, making a total of $101.77.

She also testified that the 29 shares of Penna. Railroad stock, presented to the church by Miss Anne L. Grier, are in her possession as treasurer. "There is a $300 mortgage on the manse property," she explained.

"I do not regard myself as a trustee any longer," said Mrs. Gemmill, who said she was willing to turn over to the Doylestown National Bank and Trust Company all the possessions of the church which she had in her keeping as treasurer.

Because the tenant living in the manse did not know to whom to pay the rent, there has been no money received for rent either by the last treasurer, Mrs. Gemmill, or the Presbytery.

TULLYTOWN CHILDREN TO VISIT NEW YORK

Contemplated Trip is To Be Arranged by The Home and School League

PERSONAL NEWS NOTES

TULLYTOWN, Mar. 11.—The regular meeting of the Home and School League was held in the school Monday evening. Mrs. Franklin Kirby, vice-president, presided due to the absence of the president, Mrs. Johnson.

The minutes were read and approved and the financial report given and accepted. Mrs. Frank Maberry reported on the card party, and stated approximately $38.64 was cleared. She also thanked her committee. Among new business discussed was the making of a donation to the Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist Church for the use of chairs. A motion to that effect was made and carried.

A discussion was also had as to what type of meeting is desired, whether educational, social or some of each. Mrs. Kirby then spoke of a contemplated trip by the eighth grade to New York City and said she would ask all eighth grade mothers and others in the League to meet with her at a later time. After the business meeting, a social time was enjoyed and refreshments served.

It was decided not to permit children to attend the business meetings. And the teachers were asked not to send any more seeds home to be sold.

Deny Nazi Troops Advance

Berlin, Mar. 11.—Rumors that German troops had crossed the Czech frontier in view of the Slovakian crisis were denied officially today. Officials said there was no intention of sending German forces into Czechoslovakia.

Named Papal Secretary

Rome, Mar. 11.—Luigi Cardinal Maglione has been named Papal Secretary of State by Pope Pius XII, the Stefani (Italian) News Agency reported today. Cardinal Maglione was Pope Pius XI's Nuncio to Paris during the Italo-Ethiopian conflict and was deeply involved in efforts to bring about a peaceful solution of that war.

He was born at Naples on March 2, 1877, and was elevated to the Purple by Pius XI in the Consistory of December, 1935.

While in France he received many decorations, among them the cross of the Legion of Honor.

Three-Alarm Fire

Philadelphia, Mar. 11.—Threatening to spread to other nearby buildings, a three-alarm fire accompanied by two explosions, today destroyed the huge Miller Transportation Company garage in downtown Philadelphia, causing damage estimated at $250,000.

Eight firemen were endangered when the roof, weakened by flames and two terrific blasts, smashed trucks stored in the garage. Several explosions followed two heavy blasts.

Thirty-three trucks were destroyed as the flames leaped into the building and threatened a garage next door.

WOMEN ENLIGHTENED ON SUBJECT OF TAXATION

Travel Club Hears Mrs. Wm.
R. Stuckert, Newtown,
Speak

HAVE FOOD EXCHANGE

More tax-conscious than ever were the Travel Club members at the conclusion of yesterday afternoon's session of the local women's club, a thoroughly enlightening discourse on that subject being delivered by Mrs. William R. Stuckert, Newtown. The assigned subject was "Taxes—Why and Whither," the speaker being introduced by Mrs. Horace H. Burton.

Among the pertinent statements which the interesting address led up to were:

"Our main giving is in the payment of taxes—what I used to feel that I now pay through taxes."

"It is not only our duty to pay our taxes but to see that they are efficiently spent, and to this end our women can give some aid."

"If we are taxed and taxed and taxed, until we get poorer and poorer and poorer, maybe we will then be willing and more anxious to have an efficient tax system set up in the state."

"Everything seems to be on the side of the government, and nothing on your side at all. It seems to be a perfect nightmare," she added in referring particularly to the Federal income tax.

In commencing her talk of the afternoon Mrs. Stuckert in an interesting, compelling manner, showed how two

Remember The Blizzard?

(By "The Stroller")
Many "old timers" today are reminiscing over the blizzard of '88, and many of the young bloods are becoming indignant as they are asked if they remember such and such condition that occurred in connection with the big snow and blow.

It was just 51 years ago today that the wind of terrific proportions, accompanied by a rain, started, continuing throughout the day and evening. It was during the night, with a shift of the wind, that the fierce snow storm set in earnest. When Bristolians awoke the next morning, and in fact when this part of the world awoke, they found themselves buried under a blanket of snow, which in places reached 10 and 15 feet.

GIRL SCOUTS' BIRTHDAY

When Girl Scouts light the candles on their birthday cake tomorrow they will be proving the rightness of the movement which started twenty-seven years ago as a program of fun and service.

Girl Scouts believe today, as they did years ago, in community service. They offer instant help when catastrophe strikes.

Girl Scouts are alert to the changes going on in the world about them; they are quick to do their bit to fill a need.

Girl Scouts learn to appreciate the contributions of other countries to the culture of America, and they believe in international friendship as a means to world peace.

High up in the Alps at Adelboden, Switzerland, is a charming little house which the Girl Scouts call "Our Chalet." Here girls from all parts of the world meet, and become friends.

Girl Scouts would like to share their international community house with all girls. So a reproduction of "Our Chalet" has been made for the New York World Fair. It will be dedicated today.

Thirty-one Girl Scouts representing the thirty-one nations which make up the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts, dressed in the national costumes of the countries they represent, and will be accompanied by thirty-one Girl Scouts in uniform, will attend the ceremonies.

DE-EMPHASIZING

In the last two years the University of Pittsburgh has decided that football carried on in its name will be played by students, not for hire, and that it will conform to the rules for eligibility and such laid down by the Big Ten, in which it would like to have a membership.

Among the reasons cited for the resignation of Coach Jock Sutherland are bickering with freshmen over work and wages; depiction of the squad by the application of the new eligibility standards, and in general the disappearance of those circumstances in which, year after year, Pitt has found itself close to the top nationally in collegiate football.

It would be idle to try to pretend that these circumstances have been only vaguely suspected. The decision to reform at Pitt meant that there was something to reform. The change in coaches is an inevitable incident on the way to this reform, and is useful here only as suggesting again that any school can rank as high as it cares to on the gridiron, to the extent that it lends itself to practices which Pitt has decided to abandon.

"The best team money can buy" is a reputation of a sort in the college game, but there are signs that rivalry for it has gone as far as it will go, that the number of schools who feel they need that kind of advertising will dwindle, and that the line of demarcation between them and the amateur eleven will in time be too conspicuous to miss.

For 40 months, pickets shuffled up and down in front of a New York shoe store. The business in sole leather must have been enormous, for some other store.

Though three women now own the New York Yankers, it is denied that the club will appear for the new season in the bra-and-panties type of sports ensemble.

Mrs. William Feiger entertained members of her Methodist Sunday School class at her home on Tuesday evening. Mrs. Francis C. Thomas is the leader. Plans were made for a sacred play, "Peter, the Rock," which will be given by the Karl Emerson Williams players for the benefit of the class, on March 21st.

The Yardley L. T. L. met in Yardley public school this week, under direction of Miss Elizabeth S. Weeks. Mildred Whitley conducted the devotions and led the flag salute. Susanne Labaw led the pledge and the promise.

Five new members were welcomed, Harold Smith, Stanley Pretz, William Coulton, Jr., Doris Taylor and Mildred Dilliplane.

Mrs. John B. Force, Margaret Labaw and Mildred Whitley conducted the lessons and quiz. Refreshments were served following the meeting.

their home in Olney, then known as the North Penn Railroad, now the main line to New York City.

It was while Mrs. Engle was still Miss Williams and she was being courted according to Hoyle in those days, that her boy-friend took her on an excursion trip to Atlantic City. Friends went with them and they drove by horse and wagon from Olney to the railroad station in Philadelphia where they stayed over night, leaving early the next morning for the shore.

"We hit a terrible storm on the way to Atlantic, at Absecon," Mrs. Engle recalled. "The causeway had been washed away and there was nothing in Absecon but water, so we rowed across the inlet to Atlantic City in small boats. When we arrived in Atlantic City, we walked along the beach for more than a mile to one of the three hotels. We got to the hotel just in time to get a bit of food and hurry back to the row boat and return to Absecon. There was only one bath house in Atlantic City in those days. Men and women used the same building that was well partitioned off. The bathing suits then, unlike now, included shoes and stockings and some women wore corsets too," she said with a smile.

Mrs. Engle said that when she and her husband were ready to be married they were both ready for it.

"We had enough to start house-keeping and had none of those donation parties like they have now, 'showers' or whatever you call them. We didn't have a lot of stuff that we didn't need."

"Talk about mother-in-laws," declared Eugene Snively, her son-in-law, "she is the greatest mother-in-law that ever lived. We have never had an argument of any kind. She is the most remarkable woman I ever knew."

Women Enlightened On Subject of Taxation

newlyweds were "introduced" to tax problems and procedure. After mentioning that she wished the club members to look for a while at the "huge, high, ominous pillar built of taxes," Mrs. Stuckert told that there were seven taxes which went at one time into the general state fund, with four added in 1923, later 12 emergency taxes being added and four of these eventually discarded, thus bringing the total to 19. In addition she listed the general license taxes, such as motor license, fishing, gunning, etc. "To do a thorough job of considering the tax problem this afternoon I should take in the federal, county and local. But there would be little good in such a lengthy retelling. She then mentioned there are a vast number of taxes "in what to me is an unexplored world, corporate taxes, etc." The countless corporations which are on the verge of bankruptcy were referred to the speaker telling however that she would give her attention mainly to those which touch the home.

The manner in which the newlyweds learned of the countless taxes as they applied for a marriage license, purchased an automobile, acquired a pet terrier, learned of the hidden taxes in their telephone, gas, electric light, clothing and food bills, proved thought provoking. The manner in which the employer found it necessary to "reach into the handbag owned by you and me to care for his taxes," was mentioned; together with the 58 hidden taxes in a loaf of bread. Other taxes which touched the young couple were occupation and school taxes, the method by which these are computed being given; then the huge slice taken from an inheritance received by the young woman; next came the personal property tax, and tax on real estate later acquired. "And if you think the state personal property tax is bad," stated Mrs. Stuckert after consideration of that tax, "what do you think of the federal income tax?"

The difficulty of collecting the per capita tax was considered; and the Thompson Plan, regarding giving of state and federal funds for erection of school buildings, was up for discussion. Under this plan 45 per cent would have been given by the federal government and 55 per cent by the state, the local school board to have a time of reckoning later, when the debt to the state is paid back later. "The state board of directors backed this plan, but the county board did not like it, although in that latter group the dislike was not unanimous. Governor James was also against it, and he would like it to stay crashed."

Proposed changes in the Teacher Tenure Act were brought to the fore, the woman addressing the club telling that "Mr. Edmunds who gave the teachers their good salaries is adding the school boards now to change the act."

One pertinent remark made by the Newtown resident, as she considered the making of income tax returns, was: "Many people seek the aid of their bankers, but that doesn't seem just right to me, for the banker is not paid to do that type of work, and if you are going to depend entirely on someone else, such aid will never lift you out of the tax fog."

The transaction of business followed the address. Mrs. Earl Tomb occupied the chair, and records were in charge of Mrs. Harry Neher. After report by Mrs. Ernest Lawrence, Jr., regarding a committee meeting at the Bristol Recreation Center recently, in which she told of a planned campaign to interest boys from all wards of Bristol, each ward meeting on different nights, several members of the club gave impressions gained during visits to the Recreation Center.

During nomination for membership, Mrs. Albert Dowden and Mrs. George LaRue served as tellers. A nominating committee named at a recent executive meeting, was listed by Mrs. Tomb as follows: Miss Frances Landreth, Mrs. J. Fred Wagner, N. J. Elwood P. Goslin.

The date of the annual play is to be changed in April, due to the Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs meeting on April 28th. The drama committee is to name another date. Mrs. Russell W. DeLong, county chairman of motion pictures, told of some of the aims of the motion picture producers, and of the work of the Motion Picture Forum.

A food exchange preceded the meeting. Hostesses for the day were Mrs. George W. Bruden and Mrs. Lewis M. Worthington.

FANCY MEAT FOR DOGS

TOLEDO, O.—(INS)—Ham and other fancy cuts of meat went to the dogs in the home of Rudolph Buehner, his wife, Janis, charged in a suit for divorce. Her husband fed the best cuts to his pet dogs and clamped down on the family's food allowance. Mrs. Buehner stated in her petition. She listed her husband's salary at $8,000 a year.

WRITING IS NO FUN

PORTLAND, Ore.—(INS) Most good writers don't like to write at all, because writing is work, stated Carl Van Doren, noted biographer and critic, during a lecture engagement. "I'm always suspicious of writers who 'simply love to work,'" he said. "A good writer is just a bit afraid when starting a story, but when it's over you feel you've done something."

KIT CARSON—Avenger!

by EVELYN WELLS

CHAPTER XXXIV

Five Apache chieftains stood before Colonel Kit Carson on a sandy waste in the heart of the Apache country in northern New Mexico. In their blankets, woven in bright designs and with blue turquoise studding their dark ears and hands and shining hair, they were like kings of the desert. But all their pride was gone.

For on the sand before them lay the blanket-covered body of their greatest Apache chief, old Manuelito, killed by Kit's soldiers while leading his band toward Kit to sue for peace.

"We bring the white flag," Glan-nah-tah, the dignified leader, said humbly to Kit Carson. "We bring the prayer for peace. You have beaten us this moon in two great battles, Father Kit. Apache fight no more."

Now Kit, always willing to sign for peace, showed his regret.

"You have broken too many of the treaties I have made. The Great White Father will no longer allow your Father Kit to promise peace. You must go to Santa Fe and make treaty there, and your people must go to the Bosque Redondo on the Pecos River, where the Great White Father has set aside land for his red children. There you will be taught to plant and reap and sow, and your children will be given learning."

Black eyes searched Kit's, pleading for understanding.

"We have been driven back from our hunting grounds. Why? The buffalo are gone, and the antelope, and our children are hungry."

Kit could not cope with their magnificent despair. He was watching a great race vanish from North America. Sometimes he felt its tragedy in which he had played so powerful a role. Now he heard Chief Glan-nah-tah, the proud one, say:

"You are stronger than we. We have fought you so long as we had rifles and powder, but your weapons are better than ours. We are worn out; we have no more heart; we have no provisions, no means to live; your troops are everywhere; our springs and waterholes are either occupied or watched by your young men. You have driven us from our last and best stronghold, and we have no more heart. Do with us as may seem good to you, but do not forget we are men and brave."

Kit sent the five chiefs under the protection of soldiers to Santa Fe. Four hundred Apache men, women and children were taken under surveillance to the new Indian reservation on the Pecos.

Other tribes were being ordered to the reservations.

For the Great American Desert was in red revolution. The gold rush of '49 had meant destruction to the Indians. The tribes turned on the white invaders. From California to Minnesota the earth was stained with blood. Cheyenne, Arapaho, Sioux and Navajo, danced scalp dances on the sands of the Southwest and clapped for war.

Everywhere Indians raided, pillaged, burned and murdered. They even stampeded the cattle sent by the Government to the Bosque Redondo for the peaceful Indians.

Most terrible of all tribesmen was the Navajo.

"Devils of the North," the Navajo had been called, for nearly two hundred years. They had raided, a thousand together, the Mexican villages, sweeping down upon them in painted herds, while the inhabitants fled screaming the awful cry, "Navajo! Navajo!"

General Kearney, when he had conquered New Mexico, had found the Navajo at war with everyone. Trustingly he had promised to protect them, and received their peace-pledge, in solemn ceremony. That very night they drove off a herd of his cavalry horses!

Three campaigns against the Navajo had failed. They had broken six treaties even before they were ratified. They hated all men and were hated by all.

Yet in their own villages of crude hogans they were a kindly-tempered people, good to their women and children, raising flocks and planting corn. Abroad, they were the terror of the Southwest.

Kit's victory over the Apaches delighted General Carson, Kit's new superior. On March 18, 1865, he wrote in a report to Washington: "Now the Apaches are subdued—I shall send the whole of Colonel Carson's regiment against the Navajos."

Kit Carson set out on the most sensational campaign in western annals—the great Navajo Expedition.

In June in 1863 Indian runners raced over to the desert, carrying messages to the heads of the Navajo, to the famous bloody chiefs Dolgido and Barboncito and all the lesser chieftains, until eight thousand Navajo had heard the warning sent by Kit Carson:

"War!"

War, unless, by the twentieth of June, all the tribes of the Navajo came to Kit Carson and promised peace, and allowed themselves to be taken to the Bosque Redondo. There, Kit promised, all good Navajo would be cared for by the Great White Father, and Apache and Navajo, hereditary enemies, would live together in peace.

"And if any Indian does not come in," ran Kit's warning, "and join the peace party, he shall be regarded as hostile and savage, and treated accordingly."

"As sure as the sun shines, this will come true!"

June passed. Only a few frightened Navajo had promised peace. Eight thousand others, trained in two hundred years of war, were preparing to fight Kit Carson.

In July, in northeastern Arizona, in the center of the Navajo country, Kit Carson, with seven hundred and nine soldiers, twenty-seven officers, and two mountain howitzers, established a new fort named Canby for his former general.

Kindly, good-tempered, unassuming, Kit often had difficulty in maintaining discipline in times of peace. His men were far too fond of him.

After the long desert march, and in the excitement of building the fort, the New Mexican soldiery played pranks on one another and on their officers. "Little Colonel," one of them entered Kit's quarters with an order on the commissary for a quart of molasses. Kit signed it, the quill pen scratching under his down-pressing fist.

"Do you know, I suspect our Colonel can't read?" the soldier announced back in his own quarters.

"The others crowded around him. One said, chucking, 'I'm going to read out.'"

He went to Kit with a written order for a canteenful of whiskey.

"I'd like some molasses, Colonel," And Colonel Christopher Carson, whose Josefa had taught him to sign his name, signed the order with a kindly smile.

Kit was astonished that afternoon by the increasing desire for molasses amongst his boys. He dropped into the commissary.

"How is business, John?"

"Fine, Colonel Carson. Just sold out two barrels of whiskey to Company H."

Kit's gentle voice rose to a bellow.

"Don't you know it's agin' regulations to sell whiskey to men in uniform, without a written order from the commanding officer?"

"Why, of course, Colonel," answered the indignant storekeeper. "I insisted upon your written order, every time."

A hurt look grew in Kit's honest blue eyes.

"Well, I guess the boys stumped me," he admitted.

After that he never signed an order until his adjutant read it aloud.

Kit did not drink. His only forms of conviviality were dancing and draw poker. In quarters they played with beans for chips, and when a hand was called Kit would answer, "Two Kind," by which he meant a pair. Raking in the pot he would smile and say teasingly, "You can't play poker."

Food supplies were low at Fort Canby and Kit was wrathful when the soldiers he sent out after buffalo returned empty handed.

"But there aren't any buffalo," the men protested.

"I'll bet there are," stormed Kit. "I'll bet I can get ten—and only waste ten shots!"

His soldiers took his bet. Colonel Kit Carson galloped away with his rifle, provided with only ten leaden balls. When he returned, he had one charge left—he had shot ten boys with nine shots! Two animals had been in line and Kit killed one with a single shot.

But the soldiers had not built Fort Canby for amusement. Overnight the Navajo sprang up around them. Forty of their best males were run off overnight. Bullets and rifle balls scarred the new walls of the isolated fort.

The Navajo were around them like aroused hornets. War began. Eight thousand blood-thirsty Navajo swarmed around the lonely post Fort Canby, defended by Kit Carson with less than eight hundred men. "We must march raid for raid," were Kit's orders.

At night, on their stout horses, bands of Colonel Carson's soldiers dashed out over the desert to raid the scattered Indian encampments. Returning, they drove before them like cattle, bands of ten, twenty, even fifty captive Navajo.

And Colonel Carson began sending these captives by the fifties and hundreds to the Bosque Redondo, to be cared for under the Stars and Stripes.

So, as never Navajo had harried a territory, Kit Carson harried the country of the Navajo.

He struck, as Indians struck, at their food supply. Not only did he burn the Navajo villages, but as the rough brush hogans went up in smoke, Kit's soldiers fired the corn and bean fields of the tribes, and drove off the bands of sheep that were food and clothing and wealth to the Navajo.

Back—back—were driven the buffalo—the antelope—the red-skinned owners of America. The Southwest was being conquered, foot by foot. Kit Carson was claiming his share in it, not with the thought of his own gain, but for his country.

In September of this year two Navajo chiefs rode to the walls of Fort Canby.

"We sue for peace, Father Kit!" they said, and their hawk-like features were scarred with weariness.

Kit's voice was gentle.

"There can be no peace between white and Navajo. The White Father in Washington sends word to the Lords of the North: Unconditional Surrender!"

By thousands, the terrified tribes of the great Navajo nation fled into their greatest stronghold, thirty miles long, with granite walls a thousand feet high, called the Canyon du Chelly.

JUST received from the flourishing Manufactory at Hartford, a few Pieces of superfine Broadcloths, of an excellent quality, which may be had in Patterns, at reasonable prices of Gilbert Everingham, No. 44, Water-Street,—both London Smoke, and Hartford Grey.

Shopkeepers and others, who may want by the piece or package, will please to leave orders with Nathaniel Hazard, No. 51, Water-Street. Jan. 12.

In January, 1789, George Washington wanted some broadcloth for "a suit of cloaths." Scanning the pages of the New York Advertiser, he found the above advertisement. So he commissioned his friend, Major General Henry Knox, to purchase the broadcloth for him and send it to Mount Vernon. This is just one of the historical facts that show that George Washington was a shrewd buyer and a good business man.

A close study of the advertisements in your daily newspaper will help you to buy wisely. Read these offerings of your local merchants carefully. They give you clear, straightforward information that will help you to live better.

OLD SWEETHEARTS PART

SEATTLE, Wash. (INS)—Seattle's "oldest sweethearts" were parted recently by the death of William A. McCutcheon, 93, McCutcheon and his wife, Louise, also 93, were given the "oldest sweetheart" title in a contest. They met in 1852, in Dodgeville, Wis., when both were six years old.

ON THE SCREENS

"Jesse James," playing tomorrow at the Grand Theatre was photographed entirely in Technicolor and all the breathless beauty of the Ozark mountain locale is perfectly captured.

In addition to the stars, the cast features Henry Hull, Slim Summerville, J. Edward Bromberg, Brian Donley, John Carradine, Donald Meek, John Russell and Jane Darwell.

Six weeks were spent on location, after which time the company returned to Hollywood for a few more weeks of shooting before the picture was ready for the cutting room. Every member of the cast agreed that it had been a wonderful trip and that working in the Ozarks was a stimulating experience. "Off the Record," a new Warner Bros. picture with a newspaper background, opens today at the Grand Theatre with Pat O'Brien and Joan Blondell teamed as its co-stars and young Bobby Jordan of the "Dead End" kids playing a featured role.

The last previous production in which Pat and Joan were co-starred was also a newspaper picture, "Back in Circulation," but aside from the similarity of the background, the new picture has little in common with the former one.

This time Pat and Joan are both reporters on the same paper, and considerable excitement is lent the production by the depiction of their professional exploits, but the fundamental theme of the "story"—and one that is full of genuine heart throbs—is the determination of Joan, a warm-hearted and sympathetic woman under her cynical exterior, to accomplish the reform and rehabilitation of a little tough kid.

John Carroll has his first straight dramatic role in Monogram's timely "I Am a Criminal," which opens tomorrow at the Bristol Theatre.

BRISTOL

Bing Crosby arrived in Croydon to-

Carroll, dashing singing star whose Zorro-esque roles endeared him to femme fans, doesn't warble a note in this thriller, but plays the part of one Brad McArthur, big time gambler who hires a press agent to promote him into the good graces of the American public.

A thrill-a-second drama based upon the machinations of a gangster ring, which supplies contraband scrap iron to foreign war lords for their use in the manufacture of munitions, is reported heading this way. The film, Columbia's "Homicide Bureau," features Bruce Cabot and Rita Hayworth and opened Friday at the Bristol Theatre.

"Homicide Bureau" presents Cabot as a fighting police lieutenant whose zeal is curbed when he arrests a gangster-suspect on a charge of murder, only to have his evidence destroyed by Miss Hayworth, who appears as the police department's lovely new scientist. Working sometimes with and sometimes against each other, Cabot and Miss Hayworth nevertheless manage to track down the gunmen responsible for the deaths of honest junk dealers who had refused to allow their scrap iron to be shipped abroad.

RITZ THEATRE, CROYDON

The "Dead End" kids have finally turned their attentions to romance. At the Universal Studio, where the boys recently worked in "Little Tough Guys in Society," the melodrama co-starring James Cagney and Pat O'Brien, which opened Friday at the Ritz Theatre, bets have been made that one of the six would be married before Christmas.

Dick Doyle is Outstanding Star
Of the Mat and Wins Two Favorite Events

Coach Bill Dougherty returned to Bristol High yesterday afternoon for the first time since leaving here as coach, with the aspirations of defeating the local athletes in a scheduled sport competition. But his desires faded with each succeeding event as his former pupils proceeded to pile up a score upon his new scholars of gymnastics with the result that the local gymnasts upset the invaders by a 39-24 count before the largest crowd ever to watch a gym meet here.

And thus, by scoring their triumph over Jenkintown, coach Steve Juenger's boys hurled their highest barrier standing between them and the first Suburban Gymnastic League championship. It was practically assumed that the team to emerge victorious in this all important crucial test, would go on to knock off all other opponents and thereby wind up the brief season undefeated to cop the title Bristol must yet bowl over Cheltenham and West Chester High School's gymnastic teams in order to accomplish this feat. But since both these clubs took a lacing from Jenkintown, it appears inevitable that the Cardinals too will win over them to achieve their goal. They are now in 1st place with two victories and no defeats.

In defeating the Drakes, the Cards swept five of seven first places and gained a triple tie in one other event. The only event in which the visitors took a first undisputedly was in the tumbling in which Bristol presents its most conspicuous weakness. And the other event in which they gained a tie is also a weak spot for the home club—the rope climb. One of the two Bob Millers of Jenkintown, took first in the tumbling event while Walt McCowie and Joe Sidebottom of Jenkintown tied with Dick Doyle of Bristol for first in the rope climb, each ringing the bell in 6.3 seconds.

But of all the performers in the meet yesterday afternoon, the most outstanding was Dick Doyle of Bristol, who again won his two favorite events and tied in a third one to roll up 13 points for individual scoring honors. Dick proved himself the gymnast he is rated by all coaches who have seen him in action thus far when he exhibited brilliant form and a superbly difficult exercise for a high school gymnast in gaining his two first places on the parallels and horizontal bars respectively. In both events, he was pushed to beat out opponents with exceptionally high scores. But Dick also proved he could come up a winner even when the odds were against him.

What's more Doyle broke a couple of season's records through his performance yesterday. In the first place he broke his own mark of 10 points for high individual scoring in a single meet by chalking up 13. Secondly, he scored a new high performance total of 69.8 out of a possible 75 in his exercise on the horizontal bar which exceeded by 10.8 points the previous high set up by Walt McCowie of Jenkintown. He is also the only double winner in every meet thus far this season, and his total of 23 points in two meets puts him at the top of the league in individual scoring. His total of 13 points in a single meet almost hit the ceiling since 15 is the maximum anyone can attain as a contestant can enter only two events other than the rope climb.

Probably the most exciting event of the meet was in the flying rings event in which Joe Karr came up with a magnificent exercise to nose out Walt McCowie of Jenkintown in this piece with a high score of 67.5. Both McCowie and Gleason of Jenkintown gave fine exhibitions on this piece, and Joe had to be at his best to top their performance. But he was at his best and so he accomplished the trick of beating their score, winning over McCowie by 7.1 points. He received a big hand from the crowd for his exercise.

Both Wilbur Van Lenten and Ralph Neitzel gave fine exhibition on the Indian clubs and horse respectively to win those events for Bristol while Bob Miller excelled on the mats to give Jenkintown its only first place. Leoni Fell came up with a pair of seconds to add to Bristol's score. He performed on the parallels and surprised everyone with his good work on the mats for a newcomer to help strengthen Bristol's chances on that piece. In both events he nosed out the third placer by a fraction of a point, winning over Jim Gleason of Jenkintown on the parallels by .5 and over Joe Karr on the mats by 2 of a point.

HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETES TO HAVE BUSY WEEK

Two basketball games, and three gym meets, with a possible fourth one all in one week, is the sport menu to be served up to Bristol High athletes that will keep them busy for the next seven days.

This action starts Monday afternoon when Bristol will entertain Cheltenham High's gymnastic team in a Suburban league meet. They will also go into action against West Chester High on the latter's floor on Tuesday afternoon. In the season's curtain drawer in league competition. Then on Saturday afternoon, the local acrobats are scheduled to make the trip to West Chester again for the annual P. I. A. A. District One gym meet in which they hope to retain their championship laurels. There is also a possibility that the squad will engage the Alumni either Wednesday or Friday of this week.

Meantime, the basketball team has decided not to discard the tugs yet for this season. They will go into action in another post-season contest against Bridgeport on Tuesday evening on the Dragon court. Preceding that tilt will be the annual Alumni-Faculty clash scheduled to take place on the local wooden ways Monday evening at eight o'clock.

It was announced that the Alumni team is to be strictly an Alumni outfit with anyone who graduated within the last three years eligible who has played on a high school court team. Therefore, the Alumni manager requests that all who played in the Alumni-varsity game, be on hand by 7.30 for this fray also. And to local fans who missed the Faculty-varsity scrap, this will afford you an opportunity to see the teachers in action against their ex-pupils.

If you have a house to rent, advertise in the Courier.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

Harrison Carroll

Arthur melodrama was the most famous of the newspaper stories and has been imitated countless times.

From the film company's point of view, the advantage of the switch is obvious. Cary Grant is to play the demon managing editor, Walter Burns, and this will throw the conflict of the story between a man and woman instead of two men—an obvious improvement for a movie plot.

Understand Carole Lombard, Irene Dunne and Loretta Young all have been discussed for the woman's role. Our vote goes to Carole—if they can get her.

The Blackfeet Indians imported for Shirley Temple's "Susannah of the Mounties" are fascinated by Hollywood boulevard and the studio allows them to go on regular expeditions there—accompanied by guards to see them through the crowds and to protect their costumes from being pulled apart by souvenir hunters.

The Indians have come through intact but, on the last trip, one of the guards had his pocket picked.

With other studios planning premieres of pictures all over the country, Twentieth Century-Fox steals a march and cops the best promotion stunt of them all—a preview of "Alexander Graham Bell" on the grounds of the world's fair in San Francisco. Event is slated for March 29 and the cosmopolitan production will be the first picture ever previewed at a world's fair.

Mrs. Ruth Withers, mother of Jane Withers, is having too much bad luck. The other day, on the set of "Police School," she was bitten by a black widow spider and now she's confined to her bed with an attack of appendicitis. It's the first time she's ever missed being on the set when Jane was working.

When the Jack Bennys adopt their second child, it will be a boy and under four months old. They took their daughter, Jean, now four, at the tender age of one month.

Add to Hollywood oddities: Barbara O'Neill, who plays Scarlett O'Hara's mother in "G. W. T. W.", is only 28.

The youthful Miss O'Neill also played Wayne Morris' mother in "Love, Honor and Behave."

The birth of Maureen O'Sullivan's baby will bring both her parents to Hollywood—the first time she has entertained them here together. Maureen's father is Maj. Charles J. O'Sullivan of Dublin, Ireland.

Can't believe the talk that Warners will sign Jane Wyman for the "Torchy Blane" series, replacing Glenda Farrell. They tried it with another good actress, Lola Lane, but the fans just wouldn't stand for the switch. Matter will be decided one way or another by April 2 when the Farrell option comes due.

Jimmy Stewart has M-G-M in a dither. He's in the middle of a picture, "It's a Wonderful World," and is taking lessons in blind flying. They can't ground him either. His flying rights are protected in his contract... Ida Lupino's ma has quit being a blonde, too... She's a titan now... None of the big name bands do anything to top Matty Malneck's arrangement of "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" or his "Tribute to George Gershwin"...

Matty and his lads are the town's musical sensation at the Cafe Lamaze... Marilyn Hope, the beauty picked up by the photographers as the ideal movie star type, is standin' for another beauty who's not such a bad movie star type herself—Hedy Lamarr... Earl Carroll's beginning to switch the numbers in his show. Yga and Tanya will replace the dance team of Harrison and Fisher, who go to Broadway for a musical... Judith Allen will turn real estate woman by building houses on six acres she owns in the valley... And C. Henry Gordon gave Twentieth Century-Fox its biggest scare in months. He went on location with "The Return of the Cisco Kid" and rode a horse all day before they discovered he'd undergone an appendectomy three weeks before.
